Common Obstacles to a Vibrant Workplace

- Lack of support from management
- Pushback from supervisors
- Inauthenticity from poor employee recognition
- Negativity
- Busyness
- Not understanding or accepting people's differences
- Challenges inherent in unique settings
- Cross cultural issues
- Difficult colleagues
- Performance issues (Low, Middle, High, Toxic)

3 Most Common Obstacles

1. Lack of interest or support from management

© 2017 by Dr. Paul White. All rights reserved.

Lack of Interest / Support from Management

- Focused on the financial numbers and don't understand how appreciation contributes to business success
- Think the focus is just on making employees happy or "feel good".

Research-Based FACTS

- Money is not an effective motivator for most people.
 - 90 studies over the past 120 years have found money only accounts for 2% of why workers enjoy their jobs.
- Motivating by money doesn't get you much.
 - Employee engagement is 3x more impacted by intrinsic motivators than to extrinsic rewards.
 - Non-monetary incentives are more motivating to employees than monetary rewards (especially for millennials!)

Bad Results Occur When Staff Don't Feel Appreciated:

Tardiness increases
 Productivity decreases.
 Higher staff turnover.
 Call in "sick" more often.
 Develops a negative culture.
 More irritability & conflicts.
 Don't follow policies & procedures.
 Managers don't like their work as much.
 More customer complaints.

THE VIBRANT WORKPLACE

Busyness

- * Busyness = #1 reason given by supervisors and employees on why they think appreciation isn't communicated more
- * Fact: everyone is busy.

Busyness

Authentic Appreciation Can Actually Reduce Busyness

- Becoming more efficient:
Hitting the target vs. shotgun approach
- Colleagues and Supervisors
- Team members who feel valued get work done

THE VIBRANT WORKPLACE

Two Core Underlying Issues

1. Recognition & Appreciation aren't the same.
2. Employees are people, not just producers.
 - People want to be valued for who they are.
 - Most recognition / reward programs only impact the top 10-15% of employees and miss the important 50-60% in the middle.
